

The next item was a discussion about the introduction and the preamble to the Traditions. The committee had some discussions about the contents of the introductory chapter, and decided to have a separate chapter on the Preamble. The final item of discussion during the morning session was regarding committee membership. There was some dialogue about adding and/or involving some additional members of the BOT, to ensure adequate representation during committee meetings. There was no resolution on this item, but it will be discussed at the next BOT meeting. The committee agreed however, to send second drafts of Traditions One and Two to past committee members, to obtain feedback regarding the direction taken by the committee in their work.

The committee broke for lunch at 12:25 p.m. and reconvened at 1:40 p.m. At this point, the committee started to review a draft of Tradition One. This review took up the balance of the afternoon, and included conceptual, structural, and stylistic discussions. At 5:45 p.m., the committee agreed to continue the review of this draft the following morning.

The committee met at 9:00 a.m., and resumed discussions regarding the Tradition One draft. After completing this task, the committee read aloud the draft on Tradition Two, and gave general comments about the contents and style of the material. The consensus of the committee was that they liked the drafts, but felt that the drafts needed some minor revisions prior to being sent out to the BOT and the WSCLC for individual review. The committee further agreed not to include line numbers on the drafts being sent out, in an effort to encourage a conceptual, rather than line-by-line review. Finally, the committee talked about some of the questions they would pose in a cover letter mailed with the drafts, to aid in the review of the material. A list of those questions was developed, and will be utilized in the upcoming mailing to the WSCLC and the BOT. The committee also decided to use the same format for obtaining input from the fellowship, when the material reaches the stage that it is ready for fellowship review and input.

The committee broke for lunch at 12:15 p.m. and reconvened at 1:35 p.m. The next item on the committee's agenda was a specific, paragraph-by-paragraph, conceptual and stylistic review of the draft on Tradition Two. This task consumed most of the afternoon session. Upon completion of this item, the committee decided to review "C" input on Traditions Seven and Eight. The afternoon session ended at 5:45 p.m.

The committee resumed their meeting at 9:00 a.m. The major item for discussion during this final session was a revision of their production schedule. Because of the newness of this process, and not knowing what will or will not work, it has been difficult to set definite production/development schedules. Maybe after the October meeting, the committee will have more information and experience on which to base such a schedule. During lengthy discussions on this topic, the committee talked about proposing specific periods of time for fellowship review and input on their work. Since this topic will be a priority item on the BOT's
